Sachuest Point National Wildlife Refuge U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service

Welcome to the Sachuest Point National Wildlife Refuge! This refuge is one of five national wildlife refuges in Rhode Island. From the mid-1600's to the early 1900's, Sachuest Point was used for farming and sheep grazing. During World War II, the U.S. Navy used this site for a rifle range and communications center. In 1970, a 70 acre donation from the Audubon Society of Rhode Island led to the establishment of Sachuest Point National Wildlife Refuge. Today, with the land transfers from the Navy, the Refuge totals 242 acres that provide an important stopover and wintering area for migratory birds.

The National Wildlife Refuge System

Rhode Island National Wildlife Refuge Complex consists of five refuges which are part of the National Wildlife Refuge System (NWRS) administered by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service. The NWRS is a network of lands and waters managed specifically for the protection of wildlife and wildlife habitat. It represents the most comprehensive wildlife management program in the world.

Public Use at the Refuge

Wildlife comes first on the national wildlife refuges. All human activities must be compatible with the needs of wildlife. Six priority public uses are encouraged when they do not interfere with the individual refuge's mission. These are: hunting, fishing, wildlife observation, wildlife photography, environmental education, and interpretation.

Sachuest Point National Wildlife Refuge

Provides visitors with excellent opportunities for bird watching, hiking, photography and environmental education. Surf fishing is permitted from refuge shorelines in accordance with state and federal regulations. Surf fishing after sunset requires a permit which can be obtained at the Visitor Center. Hunting is not permitted on the refuge.

Together with volunteers and Friends of the National Wildlife Refuges of Rhode Island, refuge staff manage these habitats, lead guided walks, and conduct environmental education classes.

Hours of Operation

Refuge Trails are open sunrise to sunset. Appointments to purchase night time fishing permits may be made at Sachuest Point Visitor Center.
